Continuing Education Programme On Introduction to Research Methods in Humanities and Social Sciences

(30.09.2021-02.10.2021)

Description

A robust understanding of research methods, approaches and theories is crucial for the quality of researches. The humanities use methods that are primarily critical, or speculative, and have a significant historical perspective. In both the humanities and the social sciences, the empirical method is a way of gaining knowledge by means of direct and indirect observation or experience. Recording of one's direct observations or experiences can be analyzed both quantitatively and qualitatively as in Economics, Linguistics and ELT. The methodology employed is not singular and this course aims to introduce and discuss some of the most crucial and significant methods, methodologies, theories and approaches in subject areas within the domain of humanities and social sciences.
